Anticipation

[illegible]

We begin by beginning.

We search the hallowed halls and the eyes of learned men for truth and the meaning of our existence.

On our journey, we pass over the grassy fields and through the shady ravines, intermingling with the ghosts of those who came before us.

We confront the traditions, ever mindful of their importance, but doubting their relevance.

For it is our time.

Together, and individually, we strive to make our mark.

Who We Are, Where We Come From

EKU attracts many different kinds of students. Some come from the hustle and bustle of New York City, from the sunny beaches of Florida, and, of course from the Bluegrass of Kentucky.

Mary Berardi, a sophomore business major, is originally from upstate New York. After her father moved to Lexington, Berardi decided to attend EKU. "At first the dramatic change of lifestyle was overwhelming," Berardi says, "but after awhile I began to make some new friends and adjust to the classwork. The friends I have made here has made the move worthwhile."

Many students come to Eastern to become more independent. Lydia Hacker, a senior special education major from Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, admits that her major was one reason for coming to Eastern, but another reason was to be away from home and venture new surroundings.

Although there are several people attending Eastern from out of state, there are a lot of people from the surrounding area. Tonya Maxey and Stacy Lambdin from Williamsburg, KY, decided to come to school here because it is just enough to get away, but close enough to go home on weekends.

There are many reasons for attending Eastern. For the majority, it is to get away from home, but for some it may be because that is where your friends are, or even because it is where your parents attended. Eastern may be the school you chose because of your major. No matter the reason we decided to come to Eastern, or where we come from, we are all here for an education.

House of Style

When you see somebody wearing an outfit that makes you cringe in total fashion disgust, don't be afraid. You have probably just caught a glimpse of . . . STYLE. Now, granted some people may have a little more than others, but that's no reason to sit quietly on the fashion battlefront. Go ahead, be creative!!

If you're going to do it, then do it right. If a crisp white button-down and navy cheenos aren't your thing, then feel free to break out the jeans and a Goodwill sweater.

It's true that style doesn't necessarily mean fashionable, but that's the beauty of it all. One person can call her cashmere cardigan and Aigner flats the most stylish thing to walk through the Ravine in, but so could the guy wearing the faded flannel shirt with holes in the elbows.

So which ways are people going on campus? Jenny Herringer, a freshman biology major says, "I like tie-dyes a lot, I'll wear pretty much anything th comfortable."

"I like sweaters and jeans. On campus, the comfortable and you don't feel underdressed anything," says interior design major, Ginny Sm

Cindy Foster says, "To me, comfort is most im tant. It doesn't matter if you're comfortable in h heels or Birkenstocks. Whatever works for yo cool."

The rebirth of tie dyes and Birkenstocks, as well as Guatamalan prints and hiking boots were some of the styles worn by students across campus. Photo by Sheridan Wigginton.

Living Off Campus

When dorm life gets to be too much, students move off campus. There are many advantages to living off campus. First of all, there is much more freedom than living in the dorm. You can entertain friends without the watchful eye of the R.A. Deana Flannery, a senior health education major, from Richmond, said, "In my apartment I can have guests at any hour to socialize or study without having to worry about open house hours."

When it's time to study, there are no unwanted noise interruptions. "Peace and quiet when I want it. That's one of the main reasons I moved off campus," said Babo Rankin, a senior turf management major, from Marion, Ohio.

On the other hand, if you feel like staying up late and making LOTS of noise, there is nobody to tell you to shut-up, except your roommates.

Another advantage to living off campus is that you don't have to be out of your apartment at 6 p.m. on the last day of classes. If you want to stay at school past the time that a break starts, you have the freedom to do so with no hassle.

Living On Campus

"The biggest advantage to living in an apartment is having more than one room to live in. I got claustrophobic in the dorm," said Kathy Becker, a junior occupational therapy major, from Cincinnati.

Having a kitchen with a full size refrigerator and a stove makes eating more diverse off campus. No more living off frozen burritos, Ravioli, and McDonald's. Laundry facilities make an apartment even more inviting. No waiting for the one dryer that works or using the washer that leaves soap in your clothes.

There are a few disadvantages to living off campus. The number one disadvantage is having to search for the non-existent parking space each morning on the commute to class.

Paying bills each month is another disadvantage. At least in the dorm it's all paid up front. You can leave the T.V. or radio on all day long and take 30 minute showers and not have to worry about paying for it.

The comradare of dorm life can be greatly missed at first. Five friends in a room at 2 a.m. playing cards or gossiping is something you can't get off campus. You can, however, have control over the student living in the dorm room down the hall who constantly hangs out in your doorway wanting to talk.

All in all, living off campus has advantages and disadvantages. But I think most who live in an apartment will agree, nothing beats it!

Campus Parking—Major Problem

One of the most prized possessions on campus is a decent parking space. Commuters, how many times have you driven around for fifteen minutes searching for a space? Have you ever stalked a student walking towards an automobile, hoping he or she is leaving campus?

Or dorm dwellers, how many times have you postponed a trip to the grocery store for fear of losing your ideal (close to the dorm) parking space?

As the number of students attending Eastern has grown, the number of spaces for students has remained relatively the same.

"I think the parking situation on campus is a real problem," says sophomore Angie Franks. "I usually have one of my roommates take me to and pick me up after class instead of dealing with the hassle of fighting for a space."

Although most students agree that parking is a major problem on campus, few offer any solutions.

"I really don't know what EKU could do to help the situation," says sophomore business major Mary Berardi. "It seems like all the available land is already used for parking lots. I really wouldn't want them to use any more of Eastern's landscape to make ugly parking lots."

Some students feel that EKU's park problem is not as extensive as that other universities.

"I've been to larger universities like O State and Arizona State, and our park problem does not even come close theirs," says senior Steph Peterson.

Whether EKU can solve the cam parking problem remains to be seen. U then, students will continue to deve new methods of obtaining that pri parking spot. What's the best suggesti Ride your bike.

Stress Relievers

After a long day of classes, students need a stress breaker. Many people use exercise to relax, while others enjoy nestling with a good book or watching a favorite movie. There are many ways to provide recreation for yourself if you look in the right places.

There are many sources of recreation on campus. Some students enjoy dorm activities such as visiting with friends, listening to music, watching television, or, of course, discussing members of the opposite sex.

Other students take advantage of the numerous athletic facilities on campus. Aerobics, raquetball, basketball, weight lifting, and running, or for those with less respiratory endurance walking, around the track are just a few ways students can get into shape for those spring break swimsuits.

Hungry but don't have a lot of money? the Grill students can choose from a varie of food at a low cost. Also, on Thursda nights the Grill sponsors free movies (po corn included!) and Kereoke (singing voice not included).

If you still can't find anything to do, you ca always study . . . or GO DOWNTOWN!

Snow Couldn't Stop Alabama From "Rolling On"

As the snow fell heavily on a cold February day, students began to wonder if they were going to be able to attend the Alabama concert that evening. Most loyal country music fans decided to risk the icy roads and traveled towards Alumni Coliseum. What a great decision that was! The entire auditorium was filled with screaming fans who were estatic that Alabama was playing at EKU.

The long wait in line for tickets was well worth it once the show began. Country superstar Michelle Wright opened the concert with her #1 smash "Take It Like A Man." Following Michelle Wright was Diamond Rio who performed a combination of the old and new hits.

"Diamond Rio was spectacular!" said EKU student Mellisa Elliot. "The crowd remained standing, singing and dancing as they performed some of their new hit songs."

Finally, the much anticipated moment arrived: Alabama's turn to perform. They rocked the crowd with their famous toe-tappin' classic songs.

"They were really rockin' when they sang my favorite my favorite song, "Dixieland Delight," said Wilma Childress. "The atmosphere was unreal with enthusiasm."

The Alabama concert was definitely a success; everyone seemed to really enjoy it. Everyone loves to go to concerts, especially when quality acts play here on campus.

Hopefully, Eastern's organizations will lure more musical acts in the future. Judging by the enthusiasm created by this concert, their efforts would be well worth it."

—Carla Sears

"I went to Def Leppard and I thought the crowd was more into the Alabama one. I was really surprised how good this concert was!"

"It was really good idea for Eastern to host the concert because the students were into it and there was a really great turnout as well."

Bar Necessities

September 1992 is permanently etched in the minds of Richmond bar owners. That was the month the Alcohol Beverage Control (ABC) enstated a regulation prohibiting people under the age of 21 in bars.

Although several owners tried to get around the regulation by serving food, giving away food coupons, or providing live music, the ABC's regulation eventually prevailed. For example, The Dog, one of Richmond's most famous college bars, was closed due to the ABC. Bubble's Cat Club also saw its demise under the strict regulation.

However, all is not lost in Richmond's nightlife. While some of the bars have closed, others have newly opened. The Silver Star brings a country flare to Richmond. "The Star," as it is affectionately called, provides dance lessons for those who want to learn the Achy-Breaky, the Boot Scoot Boogie, or other popular country line dances. For those who do not wish to dance, The Star also provides a place to unwind with friends.

The Manhatten Cub has exposed itself to Richmond's nightlife. Featuring seminude dancers, The Manhatten Club opened with a storm of controversy from some Richmond city officials and citizens.

The opening of new bars, the closing of older ones, and a strict ABC regulation has made this a memorable year to those students whose second home is a place called "downtown."

Recycling On Campus

Recycling has become a big issue over the last few years, not only in our homes but in schools and even grocery stores and restaurants.

As recycling becomes more popular, it is common to see recycling bins at grocery stores and restaurants like McDonald's have begun using recycled paper and biodegradable wrappings.

Here at EKU there has been some major changes as well. At the end of each semester students are encouraged to recycle their notebooks, junk mail, and other unwanted handouts. EKU's administrative offices recycle their left over paper products as well. The money that the university gets for this recycled paper is put back to help with future recycling projects. A favorite cuisine of college students is pizza. Eastern has a way of putting pizza boxes to use instead of sending them to the dump. The boxes are shredded and bailed.

The biggest contribution to recycling on campus is with newspapers. Every week the Eastern Progress is distributed and you have the option of throwing it away or putting it in a recycling bin. The recycled newspapers are shredded, bailed, and delivered to the Stateland Dairy on campus.

For the past year the shredded newspaper has been used for the cattle as a substitution for hay. Since then, the cattle have been known for their record-setting milk production and protein content. The change in bedding may not be the main reason for the great milk production, but it is less expensive than hay.

The Sierra Club is a campus organization that encourages students to get involved in environmental preservation. All students are welcome to join.

Recycling is an important issue that needs to be taken seriously. You can do your part to help the environment by using the recycling bins more and the trash can a little less.

Homeward Bound

When Friday arrives, campus traffic is sparse and parking spots are always available. Why? Students are off to various destinations which most people call "home."

After asking 30 people why they go home on the weekends, the top five reasons were as follows:

1. To see a boyfriend or girlfriend
2. To work
3. To relax
4. To see friends and family
5. There is nothing better to do

"I go home on weekends to work, to see my fiance, and family," says Peggy Borders, a senior pyschology major from Louisa, Kentucky.

Many students reply with similar answers. Some say they don't stay on campus because there is nothing to do on the weekends.

Others say going home gives them a chance to relax and escape from the confinements of dorm life.

Borders adds, "When I go home I can enjoy a home cooked meal and sleep in my big bed."

Eastern students are notorious for partying on Thursday nights. Unfortunately, like other schools in Kentucky, EKU is also notorious for being a "suitcase college." Perhaps someday more students will realize that the only way to revitalize weekends at EKU is to leave the suitcases in the closet. For now, studing, partying, and visiting with friends are all activities that take place during the week. And the week is merely a countdown for the weekend at home.

Donations for Life — and Money!

Here's the scenario: you don't get paid until late next week, and you already blew the money your parents gave you last weekend. Even the five dollars your grandmother gave you for spending quality time with her has vanished. Worse yet, your money supply is so low that you can't even scrounge up enough to buy a Coke. You're desperate. Been there?

Option #1: You could call your parents. Start the conversation with some rapport; ask them how they're doing, (acting interested is the real key here), tell them how hard you've been working in your classes, and remind them how much you love them. Then, at the right moment, when you can sense the parental sensitivity in their voices, pop the big question: "Mom, Dad . . . could you send me some money?" But then you would have to explain where you spent the money they just gave you (and you really don't remember).

A better option: You could give plasma at the Richmond Plasma Center. An estimated 250-300 people choose this option — weekly! For your first donation of plasma, you get twenty dollars, and for every time after that, fifteen. Not bad considering they do all the work.

The process is relatively simple. For the first visit, you donate blood. Then the plasma is separated from your blood sample. During your second visit, sometime within the same week, they inject you with your red blood cells. Don't worry, the process is completely safe and sanitary.

Best of all, you walk out the door with a charitable feeling, knowing you have helped someone in need. And now, of course, you have the twenty dollars that's just waiting to be spent.

Army ROTC Program Commissions 2,000TH Officer

From Bill Adams to Mike Prater, the Army ROTC program has graduated 2, 000 leaders, men and women who have served their country in a variety of capacities home and abroad the past 53 years. Five of that number have gone on to earn the rank of general.

To symbolize the program's rich tradition, Adams, the program's first commissionee in 1940, helped pin the second lieutenant bars on Prater Jan. 15 when the Floyd Countian became the 2000th to earn an Army commission at Eastern.

"It feels great to be commissioned," said Prater, who after a stint at Fort Belvoir will serve with the 206th Engineers Battalion, Kentucky Army National Guard, in Richmond. "And being the 2, 000th is just icing on cake.

"I first got into ROTC for the discipline. I needed something to set me straight," said Prater, son of the late James and Audrey Prater, formerly of Floyd County. "In the end, it was a lot of fun."

Part of the fun was being a member of a top-ranked program. For the past two years, Eastern's ROTC battalion has been recognized as the best in a nine-state region.

"Army ROTC enhances a studen's education by providing both training and experience in leadership and management," said Lt. Col. David Shrout, EKU professor of military science. "It develops self-discipline, responsibility and confidence — qualities basic to succes in the Army or in a civilian career."

Campus Turn-Out 'Unreal'

Campus residents turned out to vote in numbers described as "unreal" by county election officials Tuesday, keeping election officials on the job at the Baptist Student Union precinct well beyond the 6 p.m. closing time.

According to figures for Madison County, 366 people participated in the electoral process on campus.

However, voter participation was substantially lower than it was four years ago, when 507 students voted at the BSU when George Bush defeated Michael Dukakis.

Students were lined up outside the building for most of the day, waiting for the chance to cast their ballots for three national races, as well as several state and local offices and three state contitituional amendments.

Campus precinct election officer Mark McCoy said he had heard participation Tuesday was among the best ever.

"It was supposed to have been one of the biggest turn-outs the Baptist Student Union has ever had," McCoy said.

"We had nearly 50 percent, which is really good for the campus precinct," McCoy said.

Students who voted in the campus precinct made Democrat Bill Clinton their choice for president.

The Arkansas governor received 174 of the votes cast at the BSU, compared to 123 for incumbent Bush and 61 for independent candidate Ross Perot.

Jon Fowler, a senior statistics major form Ashland who came out of the building chanting "Four more years," said he voted for Bush because he wanted his voice to be heard and felt the presiden'ts philosophies more closely matched his own.

Fowler also had some advice if Bush won re-election.

"His focus should be the economy, if he's re-elected," Fowler said.

Matt Figger, a senior physical education major, said he voted for Bush because he's satisfied with the job the president did in his first term in office.

"He's made progress over the last four years," Figger said, "and he's made goals for the next four years."

Figger said he might have voted for Perot if the Texas billionaire had stayed in the race instead of dropping out and returning late in the campaign.

Kevin Duffy, a junior marketing/management major form Cincinnati, said he chose Clinton, although he didn't like any of the three major presidential candidates.

"I wasn't happy with the three candidates," Duffy said,"but I chose the best one. I don't like it when candidates say things just to please the voters."

Duffy said he voted for Clinton because he "agreed with a lot of the things he said," and because "Bush didn't impress me over the last four years."

Katie Harmon, a junior pre-occupational therapy major from Prestonsburg, said she voted for Clinton because he is "for women's choice" and "more middle class than Bush."

Campus voters also elected Democrats to the other national offices up for grabs Tuesday, giving imcumbent Sen. Wendell Ford 226 votes compared to David L. Williams' 98 campus votes.

Lexington mayor Scotty BAesler received 208 votes in his campaign for the open 6th District House seat, while his opponent Chuck Ellinger won the support of 117 campus residents.

On the state level, voters at the BSU elected to send Democratic Rep. Harry Moberly back to Frankfort for another House term, giving him 204 votes. Moberly's challenger, Barry Metcalf, received 118 votes.

Campus voters gave the nod to two of three proposed amendments to the state constitution Tuesday.

Gaining approval were Amendments One with a vote of 273-46 and Amendment Two with a vote of 183-132, while Amendment Three was defeated by a vote of 192-122.

McCoy said the fact that the election included a presidential race was an obvious factor in bringing out campus voters.

"I'm sure the presidential election brought out the larger turn-out," McCoy said.

"Of course that's always going to increase the turn-out," McCoy said.

Harmon said regardless of who won each race who's glad the campaign has finaly drawn to a close.

"I'm glad it's over," she said. "It was a nasty campaign. It was really stupid."

Homecoming Hits the Road

Homecoming '92 mixed the past with the future. In celebration with this year's theme, "Celebrate the Past, Challenge the Future," Homecoming featured some EKU traditions as well as some new activities.

The day began with the 5K Homecoming Run. Hundreds of legs raced through the streets of Richmond to the cheers of spectators.

By 10:30 students, alumni, faculty, and friends lined Lancaster Avenue in anticipation of the parade. Highlighting the route were the EKU Marching Colonels, three high school bands, nineteen queen candidates, and the numerous brightly colored floats, each displaying historical as well as futuristic themes. Phi Kappa Tau/Delta Zeta won the float competition, followed by the Horticulture Club and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Also during the parade, the university sponsored an open house in the newly renovated Roark Building. Alumni reminisced how the building had changed while present students seemed eager to use the building's new facilities.

The Colonel Country Fair, a concoction of food booths, live entertainment, and clowns and magicians, was held in Alumni Coliseum parking lot after the parade. The fair gave those who attended an opportunity to meet former classmates, visit with favorite professors, and tailgate with other Colonel fans before the football game.

Homecoming '92 was, as those in the past, a success, and had many students and alumni looking forward to next year.

Tamara Gee Crowned Queen

President Hanly Funderburk crowns Tamara Gee Homecoming Queen.

Every girl dreams of being a queen. For Tammy Gee, a senior occupational therapy/psychology major, that dream came true. Prior to the EKU-Southeast Missouri football game, Gee was crowned Eastern Kentucky University's Homecoming queen.

Nineteen candidates and their escorts paraded onto Hanger Field under the raised sabers of the ROTC cadets. Then the first announcement came, the second runner-up was Julie Neuroth, a senior psychology major from Wilder. Tawana Walters, a senior public relations major from Winchester, was the first runner-up.

"I'm proud to carry on the tradition," said Gee, who was sponsored by her sorority, Alpha Omicron Pi.

Gee is involved in many campus activities. She has served as president of Alpha Omicron Pi, first vice president of the Panhellenic Council, was named Panhellenic Greek Woman of the Year for 1991-92, was inducted into the Kentucky Leadership Hall of Fame, chaired the 1992 Greek Sing and received the Diamond Jubilee Scholarship.

EKU Theater

The EKU Theater Department presented the musical "Quilters" on October 7-10 in the Gifford Theater. The musical was directed by Homer Tracy along with a greatly talented and dedicated technical staff. The director, technical staff, musicians, and actresses worked together to make the performance a memorable one!

"Quilters" was an all female musical involving the laughter and tears of pioneer women. Each scene took place at a different tim in history which showed three generations of a family. It was a wonderfully poignant and moving story that had the audience laughing and crying right along wit the performers.

"Quilters," directed by Homer Tracy, focused on one group of women who attempted to overcome the problems of life.

Monologues throughout the play traced the hardships faced by the characters.

Hanging of the Green

The "Hanging of the Green" is the oldest continuous holiday tradition on campus, dating back to 1930. Young women dressed in white robes enter Walnut Hall of the Keene Johnson Building carrying holly, wreaths and candles, and proceed to decorate the hall while singing Christmas carols. The event recreates the English custom of decking the halls with holly and other evergreens for the Christmas season.

The event also features scripture readings and a short holiday message. "Hanging of the Green" brings Christmas spirit to the campus, allowing students to forget, at least for a little while, the stress of finals week.

Each year during the holiday-season, EKU's Department of Music and the EKU Division of Food Services recreate an English scene from the 16th century. The Madrigal Dinner is one of EKU's most popular holiday events. "It's the unique quality of the music and the food, and the pageantry of the event," said Dr. David Greenlee, director of choral activities at Eastern.

Highlighting the event is a seven course meal, featuring the famous flaming plum pudding. Singers, clothed in colorful 16th century costumes perform some two dozen musical selections during the meal, and a presentation of the Christmas Story during a special closing concert after the meal. To enhance the period's atmosphere, the singers are accompanied by harpsichord, flutes, fanfare trumpet and a recorder ensemble.

"It's our biggest single event of the year," said Greg Hopkins, director of EKU Food Services. "We consider it our showcase of talent."

1992 Graduates Look Forward To The Future

The 1992 May commencement ceremony — which honored 2,000 graduates and degree candidates — was moved from Hanger Field to Alumni Coliseum because of inclement weather.

Of the 1, 209 degree candidates, 927 were bachelor's degree candidates, 129 associate degree candidates, 149 master's degree candidates and four specialist degree candidates.

Some 791 December graduates were also invited to participate. (Eastern holds no formal commencement during the fall semester, so all December graduates are invited back to take part in the May ceremony.)

"Today's graduates will be tomorrow's leaders if they honor work, learning, family and service." That's the message Dr. Betty Siegal brought to Eastern Kentucky University's 85th spring commencement ceremony.

Siegal, president of Kennesaw State College in Marietta, GA, grew up in a coal miner's daughter in her native Cumberland, KY.

"When I was growing up, education wa a window to the world," she said. Sh cautioned the graduates that "it's real not making a living that matters. It's ma ing a life. Go about your work joyfully."

EKU awarded Siegal an honorary doct of laws degree.

Following the ceremony, receptions f graduates of EKU's nine academic college were held at various campus locations.

Tuition Going Up, But Financial Aid Opportunities Abound

First, the bad news: Tuition is going up 12 percent at EKU.

Now, the good news: Financial aid opportunities abound to ease the burden.

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education approved in February a plan to raise undergraduate tuition at the eight universities and the community colleges by 12 to 20 percent for 1993-94. At Eastern, undergraduate tuition will increase $80 to $750 a semester, and out-of-state undergraduates will pay $2, 252 a semester, a $242 increase. Resident graduate students will pay $830 a semester, up $90. Out-of-state graduate tuition will increase $265 to $2, 485.

But ample dollars are available through a variety of financial aid options: grants, loans, employment, academics and athletic scholarships, and others.

"Most students do not have the financial resources to accomplish their educational objectives," said Herb Vescio, the long-time director of EKU's Division of Student Financial Assistance. "Through the financial aid programs, Eastern makes every effort to assure that no qualified student will be denied the opportunity to attend school because of a lack of funds.

"There's no one program to pay the total cost of an education," Vescio added, "so many students have to use a combination. Some are helped by as many as five or six programs."

About 70 percent of EKU students receive some type of financial assistance, which in 1991-92 totaled about $34 million. About a third of that was in the form of grants, which do not have to be re-paid. The most common loan program is the Stafford Loan.

In addition, various assistance programs are available to veterans or families of deceased or disabled veterans.

The average annual award at Eastern is about $2, 600, Vescio said, noting that would cover about half of a student's annual costs, including tuition and fees, books and supplies, housing and meals.

"Eastern has always been successful in identifying sources of funding for our students," Vescio said. "We believe we offer a quality education at an affordable price, coupled with opportunities for financial assistance. Alumni tell us they found Eastern to be a good investment."

Over 120 scholarships are available, most related to the student's particular field of study. Another source of financial help is the campus job. More than 2, 500 Eastern students help finance their education through the Federal Work Study Program or the Institutional Work Program.

The tuition increase "will help provide badly needed funds for the operation of our universities," said EKU President Hanyl Funderburk. "I do regret, however, that reductions in state appropriations make this necessary.

The CHE's plan also allows the council to set tution rates every year, rather than every two years.

Meanwhile, the financial aid office is eager to help students meet rising college expenses. For more information, call 622-2361 or stop by Coates 200.

More Competitive Job Search Makes Early Preparation More Critical

Want to walk out of the graduation line and step immediately into a good entry-level job?

The first place you need to go, then, is Room 319 of the Jones Building, home of Eastern's Career Development and Placement office. In fact, you're in much better shape if you already know the way well.

According to Art Harvey, CD&P director, an increasingly competitive job market is making early preparation more critical than ever.

"Graduates are facing stiff competition now," Harvey said, "not only from other college graduates but also from those who've been downsized out of a job through no fault of their own.

"That puts a premium on students gaining related experience," Harvey added, "through co-op, internships, part-time or volunteer work."

The CD&P is a good place to start for general advice, but it's just one of many services available at Eastern to help students in making career plans and giving them the experiences they need.

The University's Counseling Center, the Division of Cooperative Education and, of course, academic advisors can also assist.

Harvey advised that it's never too early for students to begin thinking about the job search. CD&P urges new students to:

* develop good study and time management skills.

* strive for good balance between studies and campus activities.

* learn to appreciate cultural diversity

* get to know faculty and staff.

* if not certain about a major, visit the Counseling Center and enroll in the Career Counseling Seminar.

* develop communication skills, both written and oral.

* become good listeners.

* take advantage of opportunities for practical experience.

Many students arrange for a mock interview with a CD&P staff member The mock interview is taped, and the staff member offers constructive criticism. It's a tool used most often by upperclassmen, but freshmen might want to utilize it to prepare for summer or co-op jobs.

Another CD&P service that may interest freshmen is Resume Expert, a $25 software package that provides complete resume writing software, and inclusion in Eastern's CD&P database, as well as three national databases.

In a typical year, over 200 firms send recruiters to Eastern's campus. Also, more than 10, 000 jobs are listed through the CD&P office. Many of those listings are never carried in a newpaper.

Employers are looking for job candidates who communicate well, are proven problem-solvers, get along well with diverse groups and, in many cases, are computer literate, Harvey said.

They're also eyeing students who exhibit a potential for growth.

"It's likely that a graduate will hold six to eight different positions in a lifetime," Harvey noted, "so it's important for all the students to develop an adaptability to change and show they're receptive to additional education or training."

No matter how arduous the job search or how long the wait for the job you want, you can take heart in a recent Census Bureau study that revealed that college graduates on the average earn $242 a week more in pay.

Where the diploma really pays off, Harvey said, is later when college graduates are often given the nod for promotions.

EKU Course Relates Appalachian Culture to Health Services

It's not enough, Anne Blakeney says, to be technically proficient in providing health care services.

Providers should be equally aware and respective of the customs and culture of the region they're serving.

That's why Blakeney, an associate professor in the Department of Occupational Therapy, teaches a course entitled "Providing Health Services in Appalachia."

But this is not another do-good outsider. Blakeney's family roots run deep in East Tennessee. And she has seen too many health care professionals make derogatory, insulting comments about Appalachians, Eastern Kentuckians in particular.

It's more than a matter of wounded pride.

"You can learn techniques all day long," she said, "but if you can't deliver them, it's no good. How effective we are depends on how well we communicate, and that depends on an understanding of the patient's culture."

All too often, she believes, cultural prejudice based on stereotyped images of Appalachians poses a barrier to good medical care. Sometimes the stumbling block is nothing more than differences in language or dialect; other times, the biases run deep.

Many non-Appalachian students have told Blakeney the course has been an eye-opener and mind-changer. In her evaluation of the class, one urban student wrote that she now finds herself correcting others "when I hear them say things about people or places they are not even aware of. Comments that fall into the stereotypes we talked about in class come from those who themselves are uncomfortable with who they are and are too quick to discriminate about others."

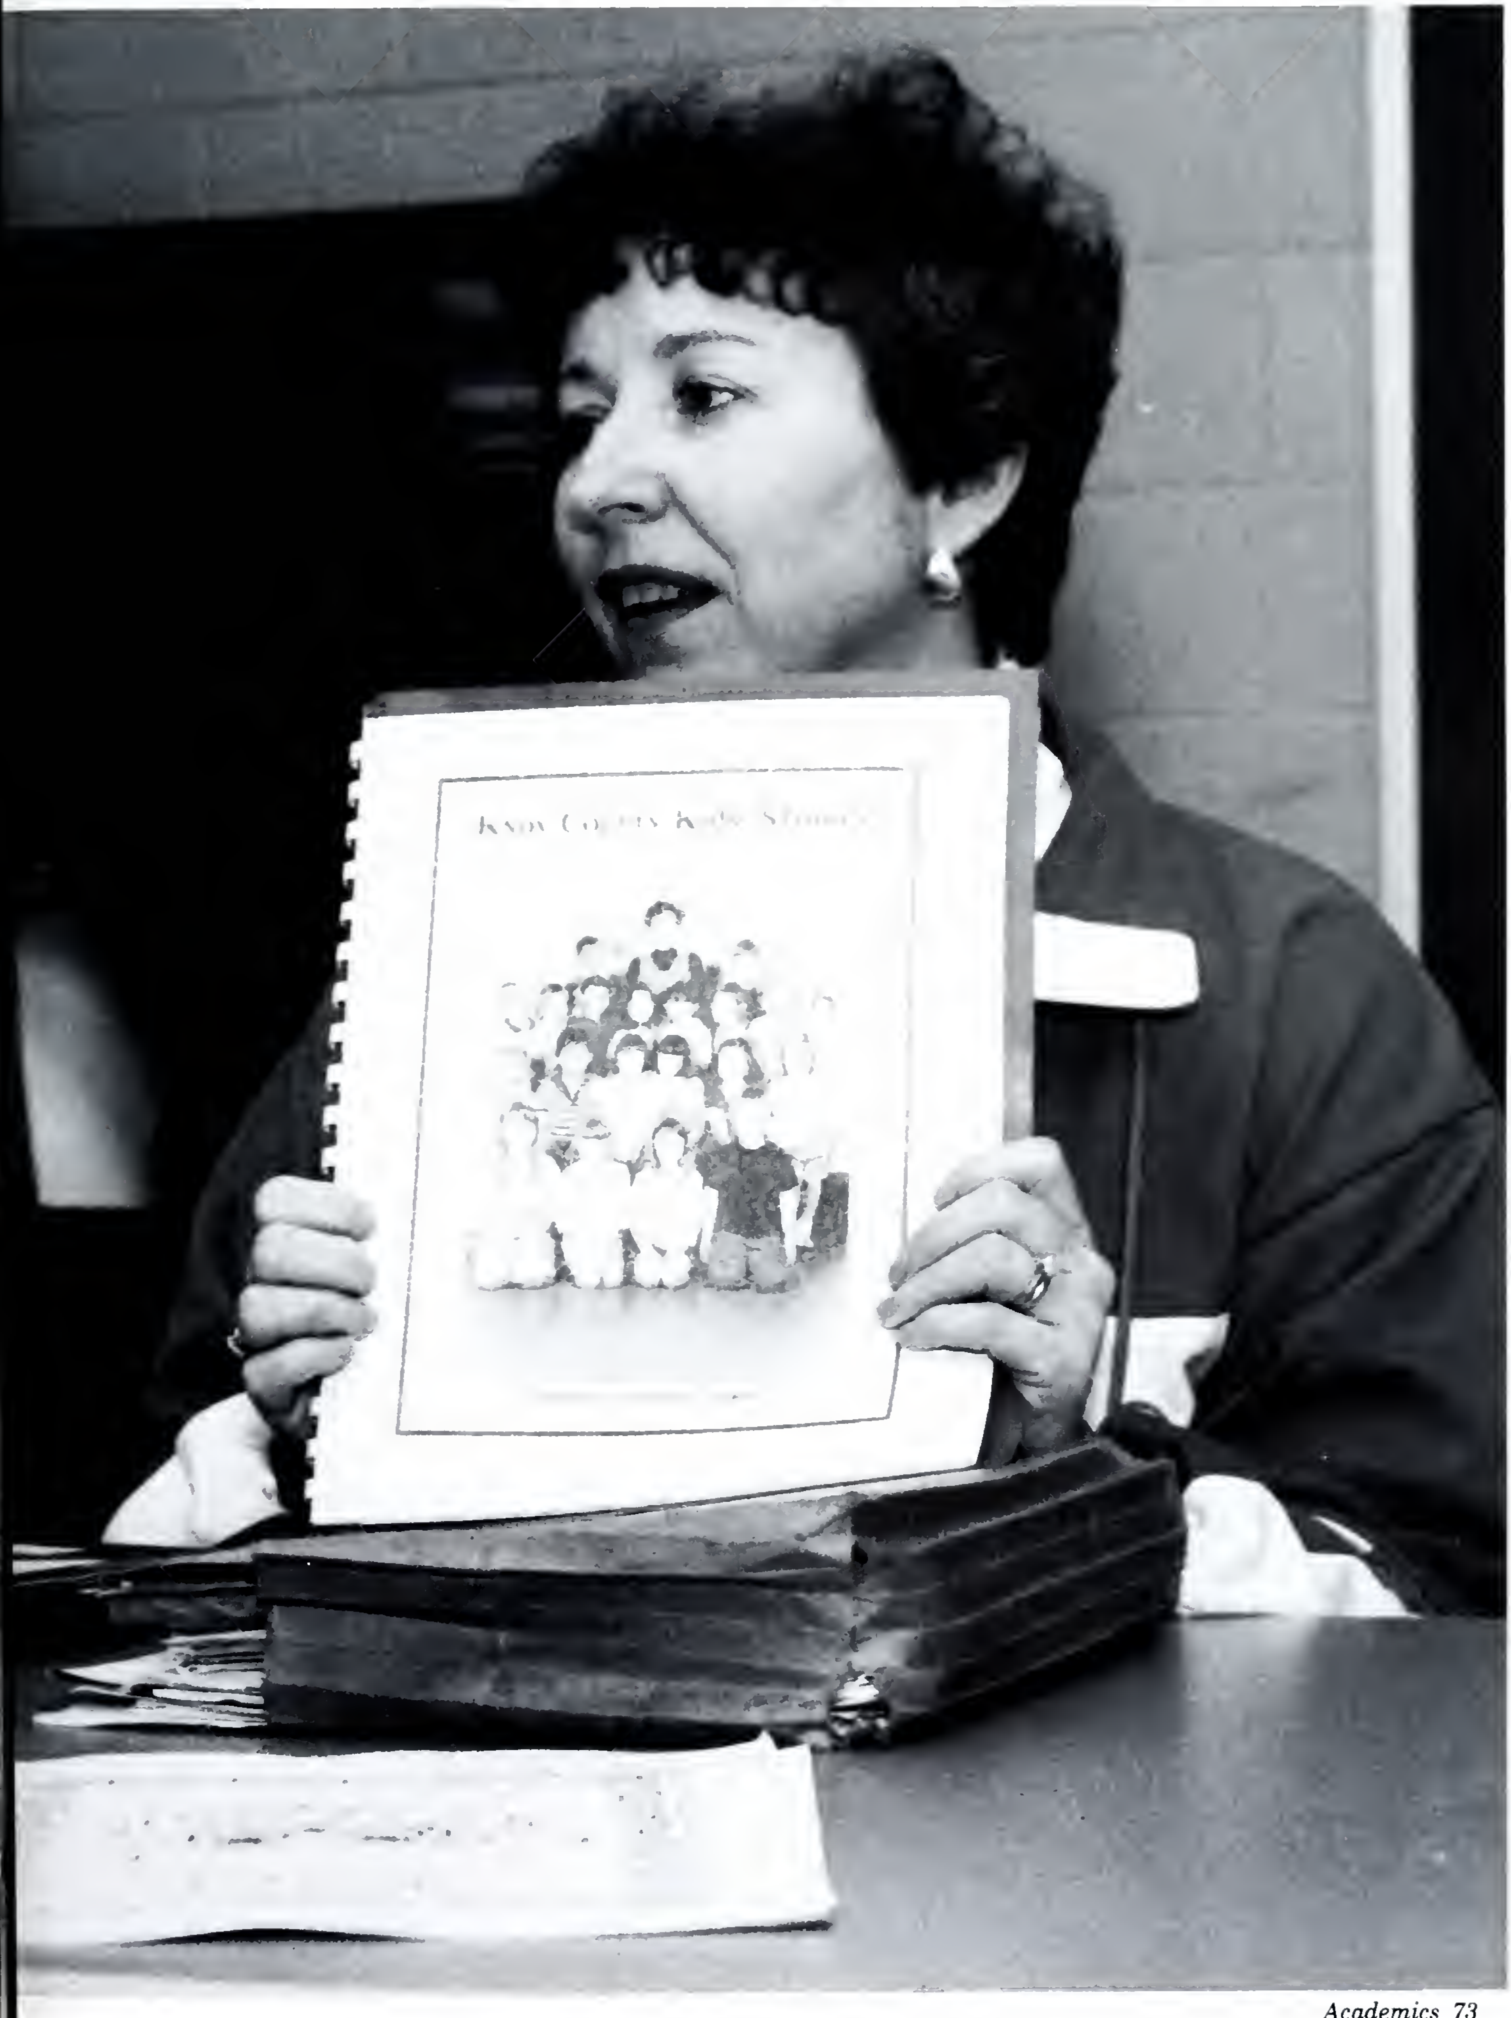
Once, Blakeney's class was composed entirely of Appalachian students—"I learned as much from them as they did from me."

Students in Blakeney's class—which is taught at the undergraduate and graduate level—learn through a variety of unusual means how to provide culturally appropriate health care.

Students also view several Applachia-related films, many obtained from Appalshop in Whitesburg, read and review books, write a research paper on some aspect of Appalachia and take a field trip in the region.

Although the course is housed in the Department of Occupational Therapy, it's open to anyone.

Anyone with an open mind, that is.



Ranks of Non-Traditional Students Swell

Just as our country is greying, so are its college campuses.

And EKU is no exception.

While Eastern's enrollment has grown from 12, 229 to just under 17, 000 since 1985, the number of students ages 17-20 has actually dropped slightly during that time.

If it seems that more and more of your classmates are older, you're not imagining things. But don't look for Geritol on the University Book Store shelves. These older students are as alive and full of energy as their younger counterparts, and most are doing quite well, thank you.

Most of the non-traditional students are in the late 20s or 30s. Whether taking a job outside the home for the first time or changing careers, most are coming back to school for economic security. There are notable exceptions, though. Take for instance 67-year-old Gene Brody, who enrolled in the associate degree nursing program last year.

A life-long businessman/entrepreneur, he found retirement didn't suit him when he and his wife moved to an antebellum farm home outside Winchester a few years ago. He took a job as a nurse's aide at a Winchester nursing home, found he liked the work and decided he wanted to pursue a degree. Through the fall semester, he made all A's.

Brody's ambitions are strictly altruistic. He wants to serve mankind as a nurse in either Appalachia or overseas with the Red Cross, perhaps in Somalia.

Sometimes a divorce is the impetus for enrolling at Eastern, as was the case with Sharon Fugate, who graduated this year along with son Bryan from the occupational therapy program. Because occupational therapists are in short supply in her native Eastern Kentucky, where she'd like to return, she's practically guaranteed economic security.

The average age of the Eastern student has crept up from about 20 a decade ago to 22 this year, according to Les Grigsby, director of admissions, who defines non-traditional student as any student 25 and over. Approximately 6, 000 students fit that description.

Besides a large number enrolled in the College of Allied Health and Nursing, you're liable to find non-traditional students in any program, including the College of Education.

"Teaching seems to be seeing a revitalization," Grigsby said. "Perhaps KERA has had some impact on that."

Many of Eastern's non-traditional students have enrolled at the University's centers at Corbin and Manchester, where they can attend classes closer to home, or have taken advantage of an increased number of evening classes.

Because many non-traditonal students have other obligations, such as family or even a current full-time job, many take longer than usual to complete their degrees.

"They measure their success by persistence," Grigsby said.

Mother/son team, Sharon and Brian Fugate, will both graduate in May with occupational therapy degrees.

EKU Meeting Region's Educational Needs Through Outreach Efforts

Whether it's an increasing number of off-campus course offerings or economic development assistance, Eastern's commitment to its service region is manifest in many ways.

Within the last three years, Eastern has opened educational centers in Corbin and Manchester, and plans call for a third in Danville. Also, more and more courses are being offered at other expended campus sites around the area.

Many prefer the centers because they can continue to work close to home while choosing from among an increasing variety of classes. A recent student survey at EKU's Tri-County Center in Corbin revealed that 55 percent of the center's students work at least 21 hours a week. Others must stay close to home because of family responsibilities.

"If not for the (Tri-County) center, I would not be going anywhere," said Whitley Countian Rose Veach, who lost her husband to concer in January 1992. At that time, she lacked a high school diploma. After earning her GED, Veach set out to pursue her lifelong ambition: to be an elementary school teacher.

"More and more people are looking for an edge in today's job market, and they believe quality higher education will give them the tools they need," said Les Grigsby, director of EKU's Division of Admissions.

The centers are not the only examples of Eastern's commitment to assist its 22-county service region. Besides reaching out to educate more and more students, the University is providing a wide array of services to communities, government, businesses and industries and ecomonic development organizations.

For example, Eastern's Center for Economic Development recently earned national recognition for its efforts on behalf of the state's secondary wood industry.

The number of students at the Tri-County Center in Corbin has almost tripled in three years, reaching about 1, 500 this year. The newer Manchester center reports similar growth, with 428 students this past fall.

The University's Institute of Government provides a wide range of services for various entities of local and state government. Eastern's Training Resource Center provides training support services for various state agencies, and its Small Business Development Center assists small businesses throughout a 13-county area.

Also, EKU's Divison of Special Programs provides diverse services to area businesses and industries, including workplace literacy training.

Honors Program Challenges Academically Talented Students

The students and professors sit in a circle, in contrast to the customary classroom hierarchy.

Frequently, the classes are team-taught, and even the professors get into lively disagreements among themselves.

The professors encourage free thinking and open discussion, and make it a point, inside or outside the classroom, to relate the lessons to the student's personal life.

All the students are intelligent, amitious and focused, challenging each other to reach a little higher.

Some sort of utopia? No. By definition, Eastern Kentucky University's Honors Program is hardly for everyone.

But it is for intellectually promising students who seek a strong grounding in the liberal arts along with their more specialized major. While Eastern continues to be a school of opportunity with open admission requirements, its Honors Program is attracting increasing numbers of students. Over 100 students were enrolled this year in the 28-credit-hour program, which includes coursework in the humanities, the social sciences and natural sciences, with emphasis on effective communication, development of critical thinking skills and integration of knowledge.

"None of the classes have been traditional lecture format," said Teresa Hoskins, a senior biology (teaching) major from Tateville. "The professors give you the feeling that if you have a comment or question, you're welcome to speak up. The professors want you to do well, and they'll sit and talk with you if you have any problems."

Scott Pack, a senior English major from Wallins Creek, cited one of the key ingredients in the program's success when he said: "The quality of the professors in the Honors Program can't be matched anywhere. I'm getting a good liberal arts education for hardly any money.

"There's lots of one-on-one interaction. The pr fessors are concerned not only about the materi itself, but also how it relates to your personal lif Sometimes you end up being closer to the facul than to your fellow students."

The emphasis in Honors classes on writing aide Vonda Tolliver, Greenup, in her philosphy course and will no doubt benefit her when she pursues doctorate in the subject. She hopes someday teach at the university level, or work in the field medical or legal ethics.

"My writing has improved, as a direct result of th Honors Program," Tolliver noted.

Hoskins singled out Dr. Bonnie Gray, the program director, for her work in developing the program.

"I think our Honors Program is a great thing Hoskins said, "and a major reason for that is Dr. Gra She goes out of her way to help everybody."

1993 Hall of Fame Winner Elizabeth McDaniels

As Elizabeth McDaniels winds down toward the end of a so-far-perfect four years at EKU, she can look ahead to a very successful career.

You name it, Elizabeth McDaniels has done it at EKU. It's that combination of academic success and extracurricular activities that has led to her latest honor: the top senior in EKU's College of Business and the 1993 Milestone Hall of Fame Award recipient.

"Elizabeth is extremely intelligent, and displays integrity and a level of maturity beyond her years," said Dr. jessica Frazier, who chairs the Department of Accounting. "One accounting professor said, 'Elizabeth's brain is like a sponge. She absorbs knowledge.'"

A part of McDaniels' ground work for a successful accounting career — she has already had job interviews with two of the "Big Six" accounting firms that interview on campus — has been laid in EKU's Honors Program, which is designed for intellectually promising students who seek a strong grounding in the liberal arts along with their more specialized major.

"The classes are a lot smaller, so you get more in depth," McDaniels said. "The Honors Program has improved the way I organize my thoughts."

The 28-credit-hour program includes coursework in the humanities, the social sciences and natural sciences, with emphasis on effective communication, development of critical thinking skills and integration of knowledge.

Students with excellent academic backgrounds are invited to apply for the program. National Merit finalists and semifinalists are automatically accepted. Beyond that, students with high school grade point averages of 3.5 or better on a 4.0 scale and with at least a score of 26 on th American College Test will be given prior ty, but other students demonstrating th potential for outstanding academic perfo mance will be considered.

McDaniels, a Regents Scholar (full tuitio all four years) among other awards, is activ
in Chi Omega sorority, Accounting Societ University Pals and Mortar Board.

Although she still has a semester to g before graduation, and then the CP exam, McDaniels is alredy anticipating th opportunity to some day persuade other to follow her footsteps to Richmond.

"My experiences have been wonderful, she said. "I'd recommend Eastern to any one, especially the accounting depar ment. I'd like to become part of some of th recruiting myself."

Hall of Fame Nominee Elizabeth Bard

Elizabeth Bard says she has "never let the pressure of having to study interfere with enjoying life."

If that sounds like a character right out of "Animal House," think again. The psychology major from Clay City can now enjoy being named the top senior in Eastern's College of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

"I take my studies seriously," Bard explained, "but I don't stress myself out."

Bard, the daughter of George and Marge Bard and the saluatorian of her 1989 class at Powell County High School, came to Eastern because, after visiting the campus, she was convinced she wouldn't be "just a number."

After enrolling as an undeclared freshman, she decided on psychology because "I had some friends who were psychology majors, and I just got into it."

And in a big way. Not only has Bard excelled in the classroom (3.87 grade point average), she has also been involved in numerous extracurricular activities: Psi Chi national honorary society, Scabbard and Blade Honor Society, Golden Key Honor Society, Phi Mu and the American Psychological Association. She won the Award for Community Service from EKU in 1990.

Dr. Richard Shuntich, a professor in EKU's Department of Psychology, said Bard "has a real fine grasp of information and seems to understand concepts very quickly."

"She's a hard worker, and she takes leadership roles well," Shuntich added. "She's very enthusiastic and has a deep commitment to what whe's doing. She's really a fine young woman."

What really motivates her is the chance to help children. Bard, whose minor is in corrections and juvenile services, wants to attend graduate school and eventally work in juvenile services.

"I've always been interested in why kids do the things they do, and why others don't. I've just always wanted to work with kids."

Hall of Fame Nominee Kelli Cole Moore

"I've always been one of those people ho put everything into everyghing I do," ys Kelli Cole Moore. "The less time I ve to do things, the more I tend to get em done."

It stands to reason, then, that Moore, a blic relations major, has enjoyed a banr senior year at EKU.

The final year of college can be stressful ough, but throw in a wedding and a estigious internship, too, and you've got all the ingredients for disaster.

With a quick smile, however, Moore will tell you "everything is finally coming together. Everything I've worked for for four years is finally coming through. The last few months have been the most exciting month of my life."

In December, Moore was named the top senior in the College of Applied Arts and Technology. On Jan. 2, she was married to Allen Moore, who operates Moore Cabinets in Corbin. And she just completed a full-time intern at The Preston Group, a well-known public relations firm in Lexington.

Oh, yes, did we mention that she maintains a perfect 4.0 grade point average, with only a couple of night classes to finish before she graduates in May? Or that she has received seven different academic scholarships and served in a half-dozen different campus organizations?

Of course, expectations were high in 1989 when Moore, daughter of Patsy Burnett of Williamsburg and Letch Cole of Lily, came to EKU from Laurel County High School, where she tied for tops in her graduation class. But Moore said she has exceeded even her own hopes.

"My writing has improved, my computer knowledge is vastly improved, and my leadership skills have developed," Moore said.

She said a big factor in her success, especially in leadership development, was her increasingly active role in the campus chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA), which she served as president for three semesters.

Hall of Fame Nominees Kevin Dorsey & Stacy Pearson

Kevin Dorsey looks back on his first years at EKU and says, "I feel like I've been challenged."

And few could argue that he's met the demands.

Because of his academic success, both as a biology major and in the Honors Program, and his extracurricular activities, the Ona, W.Va., man was named the top senior in EKU's College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences.

Dorsey, son of Bill Dorsey and Katy Dorsey and a 1989 graduate of Milton High School, said he's taken college life "a step at a time" en route to a near-perfect 3.96 grade point average.

"Semester by semester, I'd set short-term goals," he said. "I wanted to do well, but I didn't know what was in front of me."

Besides excelling in the classroom, Dorsey has demonstrated leadership abilities, serving this year as president of the Caduceus Club, and as student representative on EKU's Academic Honesty Committee.

After graduation, Dorsey plans to pursue a doctorate degree in either cellular or molecular biology.

It has also been a great year for Stacy Pearson.

Last fall, he was named the Outstanding Health Education Student in Kentucky by the Kentucky Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Now he has been named the top senior in EKU's College of Health, Physical Education and Athletics.

Not bad for someone who initially majored in law enforcement upon graduation from Allen County-Scottsville High School in 1986.

Pearson, son on Robert and Wanda Pearson of Scottsville, also received the Fred Darling Award for Outstanding Service to the HPER&A for 1992-93, and has served as president of both the health and physical education honoraries on campus.

That's on top of an impressive 3.5 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Pearson said he has always been impressed with the professionalism of his physical education and health education instructors, and will try to take many of their attributes into the classroom when he becomes a teacher/coach.

"I feel that I've grown tremendously, both intellectually and personally," Pearson said. "I've learned a lot about life."

Hall of Fame Nominee Angie Cox

Angie Cox has made her mark at EKU the classroom as well as on the sketball court.

That combination of academic and hletic success, plus campus involve-ent, led to the selection of Cox as the p senior in EKU's College of Allied ealth and Nursing, which educates ore professionals in allied health and rsing than any other university in ntucky.

Her climb to the top has not been sy.

"It was hard to juggle basketball and y studies," Cox said. "I had to get my iorities straight and manage my time sely. The program is tough. Once I got I knew I had to study."

Studying is often a difficult process during basketball season. Practice, games, and road trips took most of her free time.

"Road trips were tough," said Cox. "We traveled mainly by bus, so I had to study while traveling."

Luckily, most of the professors were understanding. Some expected less of me since I was an athlete. I always enjoyed proving to them that I could be both — athlete and student."

Cox, daughter of Barry and Linda Cox of Ferguson, Ky., came to Eastern on a basketball scholarship after graduating from Pulaski County High School in 1988.

"I became interested in occupational therapy shortly after entering EKU when a friend told me what a good occupational therapy program Eastern had, " said Cox. "Occupational therapy is a great major for me because I enjoy working with the public and helping people in any way that I can."

As an all-Ohio Valley Conference guard, Cox helped the Lady Colonels tremendously. Her list of credits includes: Eastern Progress Athlete of the Year, a conference record for most steals in a season, and school records for three-point field goals made and attempted, most steals, and most assists in a career.

"In order to be a success, it takes lots of hard work and dedication," said Cox. "Plus, support from family and friends helps.

"Coach (Larry) Inman helped me the most. He realized that my grades were the most important thing to me and that basketball came second. Plus, he really helped me with basketball."

Her efforts were rewarded when she was asked to play professional basketball in Germany.

"I played professionally for a month on a trial basis," said Cox. "I enjoyed it, but for now, school is more important."

Academically, Cox has an equally long list of credentials including: 3.4 grade point average, GTE Academic All-American, Colonel Scholar, the highest GPA for EKU basketball, Dean's List, Who's Who Among Student sin American Universities and Colleges, and Phi Theta Epsilon (OT honorary society).

"I just want to be a success," Cox said. "I know what I want out of life and that I'll have to work hard, but I'm willing and prepared to give all that it takes."

Hall of Fame Nominee
Jeffrey Winkle

Most college students spend at least four years trying to please their professors.

Jeffery Winkle began to blossom when he decided instead to please himself.

That may not be a prescription for success all across the EKU campus, but in the creative work of graphic design, it made all the difference for Winkle. The Ludlow resident was named the top senior in EKU's College of Arts and Humanities.

"The first two years, I would do projects to please my professor," said Winkle. "After that, they tell you not to worry about that. I've grown a lot the last couple of years and started to understand what I'm doing. I've begun to do more personal stuff with more symbolic meaning to me."

"Eastern has pushed me to be the best I can," said Winkle, who has a 3.7 grade point average on a 4.0 scale. "My design instructor, Betsy Kurzinger, helped me and motivated me to do my best, too."

Winkle graduated Dec. 12, but leaves his twin brother, John, behind. After John, a painting major, graduates in May, the two plan to launch their own landscaping bus ness in northern Kentucky, relegating the art interest for now to their spare time an off-seasons.

"Hopefully, I'll be able to free-lance du ing the off-months, and try to get int some galleries," Winkle said.

Winkle, a Who's Who in America nom nee, has served as treasurer and secretar of the Art Student Association and als been a member of Students for Christ an Intervarsity Christian Fellowship.

Hall of Fame Nominee Jonathan Taylor Grant

For as long as he can remember, Jon-than Taylor Grant of Beaver Dam has anted to be a Kentucky State Trooper.

And now he's in a position to finally ealize his dream.

Grant, a 1990 graduate of Ohio County igh School, was named the top senior in astern's nationally recognized College of aw Enforcement.

But he has little time, or inclination, to est on his laurels. Grant hopes to be ccepted into the Kentucky State Police cademy after graduation.

"In my opinion, the Kentucky State Po-ce is the epitome of the law enforcement rofession," Grant said. "It would be a hallenging career, as well as a chance to put back into the community what I've gotten out of it."

Grant has already put considerable effort into his studies at EKU. The security and loss prevention major has a 3.85 GPA and has been involved in numerous extracurricular activities.

"I set a goal to obtain a 4.0 GPA," said Grant. "I was very athletic-oriented through high school. About the beginning of my senior year, I started focusing on academics, and short-term goals took care of long-term goals."

Just as there was no doubt about his career choice, Grant didn't hesitate on his choice of institution.

"Eastern is well known for its College of Law Enforcement," he said. "I knew, coming to Eastern, I'd learn what I needed to learn to be a trooper. And I thought a security and loss prevention degree would complement my education."

The son of Ronnie Dean Grant and Zane Daugherty, both of Beaver Dam, Grant has made the Dean's List every semester at EKU. Add to that memberships in the Assocaiton of Security and Loss Prevention, American Society for Industrial Security, Association of Law Enforcement, Golden Key Honor Society and Alpha Phi Sigma, a national honor society for criminal justice. He is also a certified EMT.

President Funderburk Tackles Problems Leads Eastern to Good Year

EKU President Hanly Funderburk spent much of the academic year juggling the University's budget, looking for ways to compensate for state-budget cuts which have totaled 12 percent in the last 18 months.

Despite the cuts, which resulted from state-revenue shortfalls, EKU's eighth president led the University to another successful year.

Reaching out to the service region and beyond, Eastern worked hard to meet the educational needs of Kentuckians. Record numbers of students enrolled for classes on campus and throughout the service region, and Eastern alumni and other friends provided another banner year of private gifts to support academic programs and meet other University needs.

A continuing area of concern for Dr. Funderburk was faculty salaries, which he had identified as "top priority." Under his leadership, faculty salaries at Eastern have climbed steadily in recent years. However, with the continuing state budget crisis, he found that priority in 1992-93 was becoming harder to meet.

President and Mrs. Funderburk found time during the year to get involved and enjoy the University community, attending concerts, plays, athletic events, and other activities and taking advantage of every opportuniy to interact with students.

New Regents Appointed; Focus on Quality & Funding

Several new members were added to the EKU Board of Regents this year, thanks to a new state law aimed at reforming the appointment process for Kentucky's eight public universities.

The reforms were designed to "get politics out of the boards of regents, boards of trustees and the state Council on Higher Education, and get people involved who are very much committed to higher education issues," according to Joe Bill Campbell, CHE chairman.

Reappointed to EKU's 10-member governing board were Harold Campbell of Booneville, James T. Gilbert of Richmond, Dr. Rodney Gross of Grayson, and Barbara Ricke of Lexington. New appointments included Jane S. Boyer of Prospect, Cynthia Elliott of Jackson, Gilbert Miller of Richmond, and Irving Rosenstein of Lexington. Julie Neuroth, a senior from Wilder, served as student representative. Dr. Richard Freed, professor of English, served as the faculty regent.

Renowned heart surgeion Dr. William DeVries of Louisville was named to the Board in January following the death of Dr. Gross.

During the year, the regents refocused their attention on issues of quality, and worked to support President Hanly Funderburk's administration's creative efforts to meet state budget reductions.

College of Allied Health and Nursing

The College of Allied Health and Nursing reached out again this year to meet the educational and health care needs of Kentuckians.

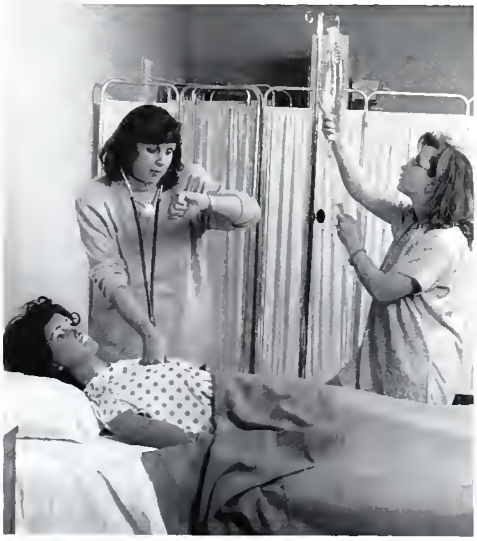
A nursing outreach program was renewed, and a new emergency mecical care program was delivered via satellite to several sites in EKU's service region.

Innovative and interesting programs— such as an Appalachian Culture and Health Care course— and others that appeared to guarantee employment following their completion— like nursing and occupational therapy—continued to attract record numbers of students.

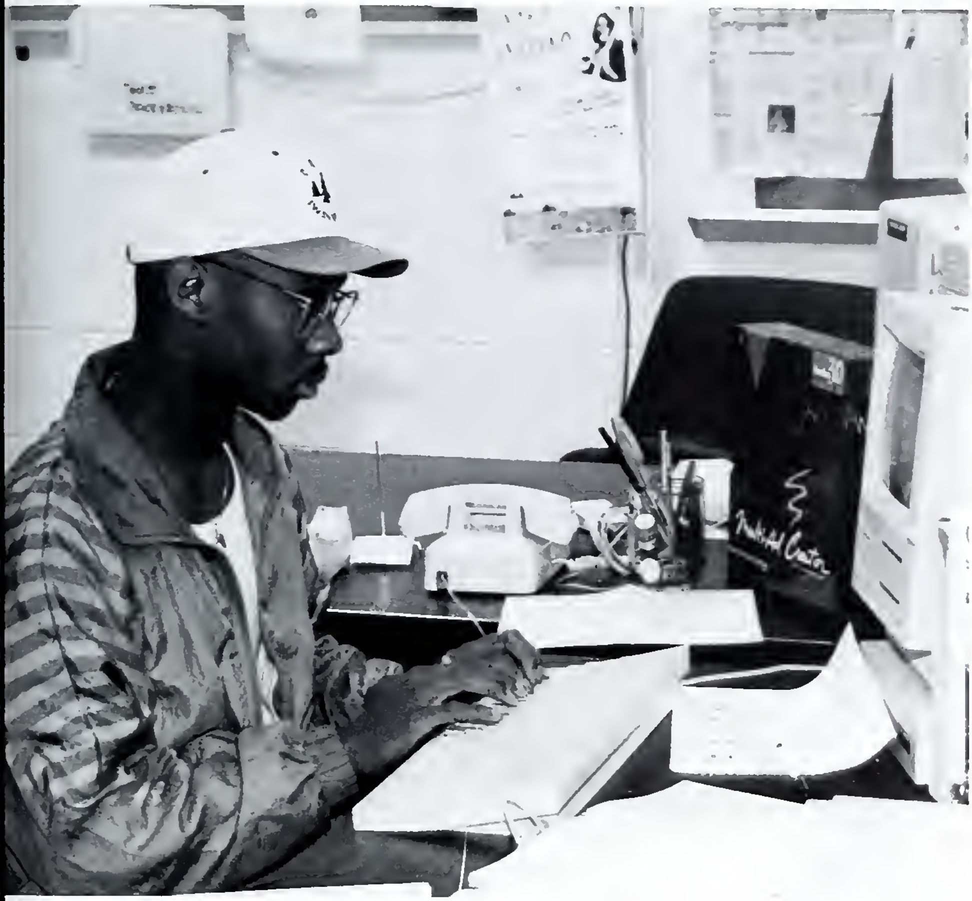
The College also boasted state-of-the-art programs in medical record science, medical technology and environmental health science.

Eastern again produced more nurses and allied health practioners at the undergraduate level than any other school in Kentucky.

Your heart pumps blood through all your body



College of Applied Arts and Technology



The College of Applied Arts and Technology enjoyed an outstanding year, with significant accomplishments in every department.

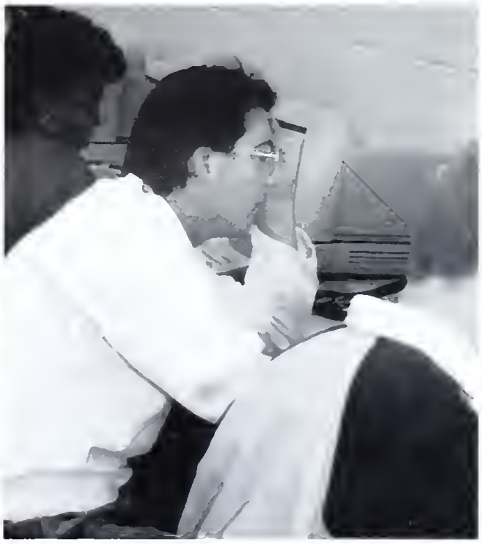
Eastern's dairy herd again was cited for record production and milk quality. The Department of Agriculture was a leader in the campus recycling program, using shredded newsprint in new calf stalls at the Stateland Dairy Farm.

Quality learning experiences for students continued to be the focus of efforts in the Department of Mass Communications, with added interships and expanded offerings, such as Madison County Cable News. The Eastern Progress once again was recognized as one of the nation's outstanding collegiate newspapers.

A focus on helping Kentucky's schools meet the need for an enhanced "tech prep" curriculum was a major project coordinated by the Department of Technology.

And all eyes focused on the Department of Home Economics in early April as the department's Living Center was named in honor of retired home economics faculty member Willie Moss.

Students interested in aviation flew high as a new major was approved in aircraft professional pilot. EKU's top-ranked ROTC program continued as one of the nation's premier collegiate military science programs.



College of Arts and Humanities

The College of Arts and Humanities, under the guidance of Dean Dan Robinette, is one of the more creative colleges at EKU. Housing the music department, the art department, and the theatre department, the College of Arts and Humanities allows students to express themselves through their work.

Whether it is an exhibit in the Giles Gallery or a theatrical performance in the Gifford Theatre, the students in the college express themselves in a way that reaches students across campus.

The Foreign Language Department is also a part of the college. The department exposes students to cultures they may otherwise never encounter. Rob Miller, a Spanish major said," Studying the Spanish culture and language has really broadened my frame of mind. I think everyone should take a foreign language class."

College of Business

Students in the College of Business utilize computers daily.

Future financial consultants, accountants, retail managers, and manufacturing managers are earning their degree in the College of Business.

The College of Business has built a reputation as a credible program. Many graduates of the program stay in the state to pursue their careers. No matter what the students' majors the college prepares them for their future careers by providing them with a comprehensive business background and specialization in specific business disciplines.

The College of Business also offers a program at the graduate level. If a student wants to excel beyond a traditional four-year degree, he or she may enroll in the graduate school program to pursue an MBA.

College of Education

The College of Education has a lot to offer students who are preparing for a career in the classroom.

Under the direction of Dr. Kenneth Henson, the dean of the College of Education, EKU produces the largest amount of classroom teachers in the state. A survey by the American Association of Colleges and Teachers Education (AACTE) ranked EKU among the nation's 20 leading producers of new classroom teachers.

As the only university-operated lab school, the Model Laboratory School gives students a place to gain practical classroom experience. Located on campus, Model gives students in EKU's education program a place to attain the student-teaching experience required before a college graduate may be certified to teach.

Students receive vital teaching experience from Model's classroom situations.

College of HPERA

The College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics houses the sports programs, the physical education classes and the health classes.

As required by the general education guidelines, a student must complete four hours in the HPERA College. One hour of this requirement must be filled in a health class.

HEA 281, the introductory class, not only focuses on physical health, but mental health, as well. As a requirement for the class, a student must complete the Lifestyle Assessment Questionaire or the LAQ. In the LAQ, students are asked to answer questions concerning thier lifestyle.

After completing the questionaire, it is sent off and the mental and physical health of the student is calculated. Many students then adjust their lifestyles according to the LAQ results.

College of Law Enforcemnent

The College of Law Enforcement operates one of the finest comprehensive law enforcement programs in the nation. The college has developed a unique approach to law enforcement education which is recognized as a national model.

Certificate, associate, baccalaureate, and master's degee programs are offered in correctional services, police administration, fire engineering technology, and security and loss prevention.

The college's programs are conducted a the Robert R. Martin Law Enforcement, Fire Science and Traffic Safety Center. The center includes a seven-and-one-half acre driving range, a large lake for aquatic safety, and salvage training, and a branch library that serves as a national resource for criminal justice information.

Loss prevention and safety graduates are prepared to work in the security, fire, and industrial safety, traffic safety, and risk management area.

The University's Traffic Safety Institute, with the only comprehensive driving range and program in this part of the nation, prepares students for careers in driver education, law enforcement, accident investigations, safety agencies, and organizations in both the private and public sectors.

The construction of a new building is underway which will house the offices and classrooms of the Kentu Department of Criminal Justice Training.

College of Natural & Mathematical Science

The College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences, under Dean Donald Batch and a dedicated faculty, provides students interested in earning a degree in biological or mathematical sciences with a solid background in the sciences.

Not only are the students in the college interested in becoming a part of the scientific community, but several professors in the department are actively involved in outside research projects that keep them involved and up to date on the latest advances.

Several students, after earning their four-year degrees, continue to take classes at EKU assisting professors by teaching lab classes. Being a teaching assistant is an excellent opportunity for a student to gain the experience needed to be competitive in the field of science or math.

College of Social & Behavioral Science

The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences offers educational programs which focus on human, social, political, economic, and psychological development. They examine various peoples of the world and their histories, cultures, physical environments, and problems. Responsive public service programs meet a variety of regional needs.

The college, through the Department of Geography and Planning, serves as a source for general geographic information. The University's travel and tourism program provides training for professionals entering the expanding travel and tourism industries.

Faculty in the Department of History are actively involved in a number of projects designed to provide students with both an appreciation of their past and a better understanding of contemporary society.

The Roark Building, which currently houses the departments of geology and geography and planning, and the office of the College's dean, Vance Wisenbaker, underwent a year-long renovation.

Dr. Janet Patton helps her political science students with their research assignment.

Graduate School

Writing papers is a major facet of graduate work.

For students who want to further education beyond a four-year bachelor's degree, the Graduate School offers master's degrees in Eastern's nine colleges.

Graduate classes, like undergraduate classes, require dedication and determination from students. Students in the program are often forced to juggle a full-time job or assistantship while taking class.

English graduate student, DeeAnn Jacobs, sometimes finds it difficult to balance her assistantship at Public Information and her classes. Jacobs said, "The work load of graduate school is more extensive, but the classes are more focused. It's challenging, but it's worth it."

Literary criticism students wait for class to begin.

ROW 2: E. Jay Angel, Mike Royer (Vice Roy), Dr. Libby Fraas (Faculty Adviseor), Mark White
ROW 3: Dave Richardson, Brett Dunlap, Joe Castle, Angie Hatton

The Society of Professional Journalists is a professional organization for journalism students. The objective of the club is to give the public responsible journalists who are aware of what is going on around them and are capable of covering it in a professional manner. The SPJ is advised by Elizabeth Fraas.

Student Alumni Ambassadors

Student Alumni Ambassadors are involved in numerous University functions. They serve as hosts/hostesses at several campus events, provide campus tours to various groups, go on recruiting trips, help coordinate Homecoming, Alumni Day, the annual phonathon and other alumni events. Members also conduct a variety of programs that help fellow students and the local community. Invitation to membership is based on leadership potential, academic achievement and a willingness to devote time to SAA activities. Members must maintain a 2.5 GPA. SAA members work closely with the Alumni Affairs staff and the Development staff.

Student Association

The Student Association is a representative voice for all full-time students ttending EKU. The Student Associaion passes legislation which provides he basis for University policy regarding tudent life. Student senators are elec-ed from their respective colleges. The
A gives the University a central organiation to look to for a statement of the oncerns that deal not only with camus needs and policy changes, but also ith concerns of our society. The SA ies to continue to represent the divrse views of all students.

Greek Weekend

Greek Weekend 1993 took place February 4-7. This year's focus was to help Habitat for Humanity, an organization in Lexington, that houses the homeless.

Tammy Gee of Alpha Omicron Pi and Tom Martin of Kappa Alpha Order were chairpersons of 1993 Greek Weekend.

Greek Weekend was kicked off Thursday, February 4, with an inspirational service.

Greek sing was Friday, February 5. The theme was "Facing Tomorrow Today." Kappa Alpha Theta and Kappa Alpha won recognition for having skits that best followed the theme.

The winners of Greek Sing were Alpha Delta Pi and Phi Delta Theta, with Delta Zeta and Beta Theta Pi taking second place. In third place was Kappa Delta and Kappa Alpha.

The Greek Games took place on Saturday, February 6. Sororities and fraternities were paired together to compete in the different events. Alpha Chi Omega and Pi Kappa Alpha captured first place in the games. Kappa Alpha Theta and Beta Theta Pi received second place, while Chi Omega, Delta Zeta, Kappa Alpha, and Tau Kappa Epsilon tied for third.

The chapters that had the greatest philanthropic contribution for the weekend were: Alpha Omicron Pi and Kappa Alpha in first place, Chi Omega and Beta Theta Pi in second, and Pi Beta Phi and Phi Delta Theta in third.

Participation awards for Greek Weekend were also given. Alpha Omicron Pi and Kappa Alpha received first place. Chi Omega and Beta Theta Pi took second, and Pi Beta Phi and Phi Delta Theta finished third.

The Leadership Awards ceremony February 7, ended Greek Weekend. Several awards were given. Among them was Greek Man and Woman of the Year. This was given to Teresa Stivers of Pi Beta Phi and David Braden of Pi Kappa Alpha. The Fealty Award given for faithfulness and allegiance to the greek system was presented to Tammy Gee of Alpha Omicron Pi and Keith Riley of Sigma Chi. The most improved chapter award was given to Delta Zeta and Phi Delta Theta.

Student Athletes

Going to classes, keeping up with homework, and finding time to do the "extras," is a difficult task for most students. However, to add another time-consuming responsibility such as college athletics and the task seems nearly impossible.

EKU's student athletes have won the Ohio Valley Conference Academic Achievement Banner each of the past four years. This honor makes a statement about Eastern's athletic program and, more importantly, those who participate in it.

Dean Marks, a senior golfer, says, "It takes all th hours of the day, but being dedicated to golf gives me the initiative to do well in school and all things I do." Marks, a computer science majr, was named 1992 All-America Scholar by Golf Coaches Association of America.

"You have to watch the minutes," adds Amy Clements, a junior cross country runner, who has maintained a 3.96 GPA in physical education. When Clements is less busy, she gets less done; it helps her to be on a schedule.

"Time management is the motto for Jason Thomas, a junior football player with a 3.29 GPA. Thomas feels that if he can handle the responsibility and pressure now, he will have a better chance of succeeding in his future occupation. Thomas says, "It makes me feel good about myself because I can handle so much."

Student athletes who are dedicated to both sports and academics have to make a lot of sacrifices in order to make the grades needed to participate. Most sports during the off-season practice an average of 20 hours a week, along with games or match During off-season, athletes still have to keep in sha so, in fact, it's a never ending task.

When asked how she handles the responsibility both school and tennis senior Heidi Kallestad said can't do one without the other; they balance ea other." Kallestad was awarded the 1992 Presiden Scholar Award and was a member of the OVC Co missioner's Honor Roll.

Through hard work, dedication, and a persister to excel, the student athletes of EKU have achiev great success both in the classroom and in athletic spotlight.

Clements says all the hard work pays off. "I worth it because of the personal satisfaction."

THE ETERNAL COLONEL

Matt Marlowe, EKU's mascot, is number one in the nation. In April 1992, Marlowe competed in the niversal Cheerleaders Association's naonal competition in San Antonio, Texas, nd brought the national title home to KU.

Marlowe said that when he first won the tle, it was hard to comprehend. "It was ne of the best feelings, but it took about a ay to really sink in that I was the best in e whole United States."

The senior organizational communicaons major, completed his fourth season his year as the EKU mascot. He audioned for the job as a freshman, thinking it would just be something fun to do" in his spare time. "I've always been in front of people and wanted to be the center of attention, kind of a class clown," he admitted.

"After my first basketball season, I went to mascot camp and won the camp championship," he recalled. "I realized then that I might have some natural ability to entertain. I set my goal then to win the national championship."

Marlowe was chosen to compete in the mascot "final four" last year on the basis of a videotape of his performances at EKU football and basketball games. At San Antonio, he competed against mascots from the University of Alabama-Birmingham, Virginia Tech and the University of Dayton.

He ranked second in the videotape portion of the competion, but won the title on the basis of a skit called "The Eternal Colonel," which took his audience down a memory lane of pop culture.

Marlowe, who graduated in December, is pursuing a career as a mascot for a professional sports team.

Marlowe said that the burn out rate for professional mascots is five to six years. "But the San Diego Chicken is in his 30's and he's a millionaire," said Marlowe. "As long as I can do it physically, and the money's there, I will."

Cheerleaders Climb On U

On Christmas Day, anyone tuned in to ESPN got to see a three-second glimpse of the Eastern cheerleaders.

It may not sound like much, but that little blurb of TV airtime was not only a big honor for our cheerleaders, but a hard-earned reward for sweat and energy put forth all year.

Eastern placed fourth in their division at the 1992 Universal Cheerleaders Association's national competition and Morehead State University took first place in the competition held in San Antonio, Texas.

This was Eastern's first time to ever make it to the national level of competition and, although the squad was happy to place fourth in the nation, they weren't satisfied.

"We're going to try like hell to beat Morehead," said Brian Dewire, co-captain.

The squad practices six days a week most weeks, for two hours each day, and their season never ends because they cheer for football and basketball season and then get ready for summer camp.

They also buy all their own equipment since cheerleading is not considered a sport, but an organization.

They must send in videotapes to be judged to determine which schools compete in nationals.

They are videotaped performing their routine both during practice and working the crowd in a game.

The team's advisor, Skip Daugherty, said the game video is the toughest because of the lack of enthusiasm from the students at games.

"More support from the crowd would help," senior cheerleader Scotty Brov said.

They started taping their routine for th year's nationals this week and they ha high expectations for 1993.

"We're much better than last year," C captain Kim Thompson said.

Although winning competition is impo
tant to them, none of them gave compe tion as the reason they wanted to i

The Dance Colonels

Everyone knows that Eastern's dance team is called the Dance Colonels. Everyone also knows that the Dance Colonels perform at football and basketball games, as well as at pep rallies and parades. What everyone does not know is what it takes to be a Dance Colonel. Becki Tribble knows; she's been a member of the team for two consecutive years.

Tribble is a sophomore, elementary education major, from Berea. She first tried out for the Dance Colonels when she was a senior in high school. "I started the clinics the second day. I was scared because I didn't know anyone," recalled Tribble.

She practiced the routines she learned, at home. Finally, it was try out day. Tribble danced with three other girls to the beat of "I Wanna Be Rich." The three judges took their time deciding who had made the squad. Tribble had to wait two hours for the results. "I really thought I hadn't made it because everyone was older than me. I almost left early and didn't wait for the results," Tribble remembered.

When the results were posted, she waited until last to check for her number. "When I saw number six, I double checked to be sure," Tribble said. "I couldn't believe I made it."

Tribble is not the only Dance Colonel to go through the excitement of making the squad. This year's Dance Colonel team has 26 members, and 19 of them are new. "This is one of the largest squad's in years," commented their advisor, Joetta Tipton.

The second time Tribble tried out for the Dance Colonels was easier. "I was a little scared but I was pretty sure I'd make it again, and I did," she said.

Dana Tipton, a three year veteran of the Dance Colonels, hung up her dancing shoes this year, and is presently the squad's choreographer. "The squad has changed-over a lot this year, said Tipton. "I consider it a better squad, more uniform, and more controlled."

Tribble said that when she made the dance team she immediately made lots of new friends. This was the factor that helped her decide to live on campus ans not commute from Berea. "I feel that if I hadn't been a Dance Colonel, I wouldn't have lived at school, but the girls met me half way and became my friends."

At practices, four afternoons each week, Tribble works hard. "Going to practice gets my mind off everything. It's a stress release," she said.

As far as academics are concerned, the Dance Colonels must maintain a 2.0 GPA to participate on the team.

It's obvious, the Dance Colonels know hard work!

EKU Colonels Have Winning Seasor

EKU finished the year with a 9-3 record an a 12the place ranking in the final NCAA Division 1-AA poll. The Colonels were eliminated in the first round of the 1-AA playoffs 44-0 by Marshall in Huntington, WV. This marked Eastern's 13th appearance (the most by any school in the country) in the 15 year history of the Division 1-AA playoffs.

Individually, eight athletes were named to the All Ohio Valley Conference first and second teams. Senior tailback, Markus Thomas, highlighted the Colonel selections as he was named to the first-team offensive unit and was also selected as the league's Offensive Player of the Year.

"I wish I had a hundred players with the attitude, desire and work ethic of Markus Thomas," said EKU head football coach, Roy Kidd.

Joining Thomas on the OVC's first-team offensive squad were senior tackle Brian Pressler and senior guard Mike Thomas.

Defensively, junior tackle Chad Bratzke and senior cornerback Brad Ladd were named first-team All-OVC.

Second-team members include sophomore punter Tim McNamee, senior placekicker Todd Duffy, and freshman fullback Carlo Stallings.

The Record Breaker

The Colonels may not have won the playoffs, but they still have reason to be proud. Senior tailback Markus Thomas was able to break school, OVC, and national records for rushing, yards, and touchdowns.

Thomas, an industrial technology major, from Cincinnati, finished his four year career at Eastern by being chosen as the 1992 OVC Offensive Player of the Year. In 1992, he set a new Division 1-AA record for most yards rushing, including regular season and playoff yardage. His record was 5, 552 yards and 52 touchdowns rushing.

EKU almost didn't get this great player four years ago. Thomas was recruited by a lot of schools, including the University of Kentucky. However, EKU was the only school to offer him a scholarship and make him feel wanted. "I liked what I saw. EKU was positive and I wanted to go to a school where I was wanted," said Thomas.

Thomas explained that when he came here in the Fall of 1989 he didn't expect to break any records, he just wanted a chance to play. "As a freshman, I only played a little bit," said Thomas. "When I started breaking records this semester, I was happy for myself and the team."

Football is not the only thing on Thomas' mind. He is graduating in the spring and is thinking about the future. "Hopefully, I will go pro. The Miami Dolphins came to my home and spoke to me about possible recruitment," said Thomas. He also explained that if football didn't work out he would like to return to school to study computer animation.

With Thomas' busy schedule he is still able to find time to workout with the track team and maybe even compete this year. He is also a member of Alpha Phi Alpha and was their recording secretary from 1989 to 1992. "I believe that incoming freshman need to be prepared to work," said Thomas. He also said that if he makes it to the pros, he wants to put EKU on the map.

Men's Basketball

Beginning the 1992-1993 season with a new coach, Mike Calhoun, the Colonels did not know what to expect. After the team's outstanding performance in the 82-73 loss to Kentucky, they soon realized their talent.

"Make no mistake about it. We're awfully proud of our players' efforts and accomplishments in the Kentucky game. We played poised and under control in a tough setting and against a very talented, well-coached ball club," Calhoun said.

Eastern was able to come up with one of its most impressive performances in school history at Rupp Arena before 23, 835 screaming fans.

Outmanned physically, EKU ran out to a 20-7 lead in the early portion of the opening half, only to lead by two, 37-35, at the break.

Eastern led for the last time in the game with 2:21 to go when freshman point guard Brad Divine hit two free throws to give EKU a 73-72 lead. Kentucky scored the last ten points of the game to win by nine.

"This has been an honor to play the University of Kentucky. Most of these players grow up rooting for Kentucky and hoping to play for them in Rupp Arena. For a lot of the guys on our team, this has been a dream come true," Calhoun said.

Women's Basketball

The 1992-93 Lady Colonels are one of the most talented teams Head Coach Larry Inman has had furing his four-year reign at EKU. The team returned four seniors: three year letter winner Sue Zylstra; Tiffany Mayfield, who finished third in the OVC last season with 75 steals; Jaree Goodin-Wiseman, a pre-season All-American candidate; and Segena MacKeroy, a member of last year's OVC All-Tournament team.

Adding to the team's talent is Auburn University transfer Kim Mays, who was Miss Basketball in Kentucky during the 1989-90 high school season.

"Kim is the type of player that can be an impact player immediately," said Inman. "She has gained valuable collegiate game experience already and will be a tremendours asset to our program."

The Lady Colonels, who were ranked number one in the OVC media pre-game poll, opened the 1993 season with a 72-52 win against Ball State.

1992 Baseball Team Endures 52 Games

The 1992 Baseball team began the sea- on with high hopes, returning five starters om last year's 26-28 team.

"I think one of our major assets this year senior leadership," said head coach Jim ard prior to the 1992 season.

EKU, who finished the 1992 season with 22-30 overall record and in fourth place in e final OVC standings with an 11-10 ague mark, was defeated 4-1 in the pening round of the OVC tourney by the ventual champion Middle Tennessee and hen was eliminated from the tournament y Austin Peay, 13-10.

Leading the Colonels with the bat this eason was rightfielder Brett Griffin who nished the season with a .361 batting average, three home runs and 33 RBI's.

Other .300 hitters included designated hitter Troy Coon at .315 and leftfielder Matt Mayard at .307.

Griffin and righthanded pitcher Joe Vogelgesang were selected to the second-team All-OVC team.

Vogelgesang, a junior from Cleves, Ohio, compiled an 8-5 record with a 4.34 E.R.A.

Griffin, a senior from Springfield, Virginia, collected six doubles and 19 hits vs. OVC teams.

"These two guys had great regular seasons. Both have the ability to carry a team with their to performance," Ward said.

Volleyball Team Gains Experience

Eastern Kentucky's volleyball team finished the 1992 season with a 13-19 record including a 10-6 OVC record.

"One characteristic of this team is that they worked hard from beginning to end," said Colonel head coach Geri Polvino.

The Colonels had three players chosen to the All-OVC Volleyball teams. On the first team was sophomore Lori Federmann. Federmann averaged 2.2 kills per game and 1.6 digs per contest this season.

"I am honored that I was chosen," said Federmann. "We will have more experience as a team next season because we will not lose as many seniors."

Selected to the All Freshman team were Lori Shafer and Sharon Morely. Shafer averaged 5.6 assists per game this season. Morley averaged 2.0 kills per game with a .168 attack percentage.

"I am very excited and shocked that I was selected," said Morley. "About next season, I am very optimistic."

Coach Sandra Martin's Lady Netters achieved success both on and off the court. With a 3.45 cumlative grade point average, the team had the highest GPA of any team in the history of Eastern athletics. Because of this accomplishment, the team was awarded the prestigious OVC Medal of Honor.

Martin was named the 1992 OVC Coach of the Year. "This is the first time in awhile that the coach of the championship team didn't win Coach of the Year," said Martin, who guided her team to a 10-3 dual match mark in 1992. "So I am really honored to receive this award."

The men's team finished with a record of 13 wins and 7 losses. The netters placed fifth in the OVC with a 3-3 record. "We were a team that was really together," recalled Chad Dyer about last season.

Because the OVC did not sponser an official conference track meet, EKU hosted a meet for conference teams. Battling high humidity and 85-degree heat, the Lady Colonel runners tied for the championship while the men captured third place.

''We were very pleased to tie for the championship,'' Coach Rich Erdman said about the Lady Colonel runners. ''The irony is, we were third indoors and we didn't compete in the four field events. We added two more field events, and we tied for the title.''

The men's chances of winning the title were minimized by the lack of competitors for the field events, but still managed a third place finish. ''Not having anybody in the field even was a glaring weakness,'' Erdman sai

Both teams worked hard to prepa for the meet. EKU coaches and tea members hope the OVC will recogni the hard work by scheduling an offic meet.

Softball Team Faces First Season

EKU athletic fans have a new and exciting sport to watch, women's fast-pitch softball. n 1994, softball will be an OVC championship sport; until then, head coach Jane Worthington wants her spuad to gain experience in hopes of capturing this championship.

During the first games of the fall season, the team demonstrated how attainable this goal may be. The Colonels defeated Miami of Ohio 7-6 in the 10th inning of the first game and 2-1 in seven innings in the second game of the twinbill.

Worthington was assistant coach at Miami of Ohio two years ago. "They are a respectable team," said Worthington. "Defeating a team I used to coach made the victory even sweeter."

The Colonels faced tough competition during its first season as a team. "This is our first season, unlike the other conference teams that have been together for some time," said Worthington. "Murry State is the only school in the OVC without a softball team."

As a collegiant player, Worthington was a starter on the 1981 Utah State University national championship team. She has also served as an assistant coach for six years. With her experience, combined with the respect she has from her players, softball fans can count on watching many Colonel wins in the future.

The 1992 men's golf team made its mark in EKU sports history by winning the Ohio Valley Conference golf tournament. Eastern, the tournament's runner-up for four of the last five years, captured its first title since 1986.

Despite cold, damp weather, Eastern shot a solid 898 for 54 holes, some 15 strokes better than second-place Austin Peay. "I am really proud of this golf team. They worked hard all year long, and this is a great way to cap off the year. Our goal in the coming seasons is to put OVC golf on the national map, and I believe that is the goal of every team that played in this tournament," said Coach Lew Smither.

Golfer Dean Marks, a computer science major, was named All-American Scholar by the Golf Coaches Association of America. Marks concluded the year with a 3.41 cumulative grade point average and a stroke average of 76.53.

Cross Country Teams

The EKU men's and women's cross country teams, coached by Rick Erdmann, successful season. They came away victorious in several of their meets. Eastern Kentucky won over the University of Kentucky in a cross country dual meet. EKU also came in second in the Western Kentucky Track Legends Classic Cross Country Invitational. But the highlight of their season was winning The Kentucky Intercollegiate Championship. They ran against many outstanding, and still came away with a winning season.

The Art of Fine Photography

Photography is the key to any yearbook. Greg Perry has captured the essence of Eastern's college life through the lens of his camera. He has earned five Mark of Excellence Awards for the Society of Professional Journalists while being a photographer for EKU's Public Information. He hopes some day to be a freelance magazine sports photographer.

Another year, ended.

Forever gone — the hopes, the dreams, the opportunities.

And our time.

All that's left of our journey are the memories, those catch-if-you-can glimpses of what was, and what could have been.

Remember.

For this grand old lady we call Eastern has touched our lives.

And, by damn, we've certainly made our mark on he
